Cases initially assigned to a United States Magistrate shall be administered by that judge, to include the scheduling of all discovery matters, and with the consent of the parties, the conduct of trial and/or entry of final judgment. Pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 73, all full-time United States Magistrates in the District of Oregon have been certified to exercise civil jurisdiction in assigned cases, to include trial and entry of final judgment. Appeals from the entry of such judgments go directly to the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, not to a trial de novo before a district judge. Therefore, parties are strongly encouraged to file a Consent to Trial and Entry of Final Judgment [See Fed.R.Civ.P. 73(b)]. See "Role of the Magistrate Judge" at the Court's web site at www.ord.uscourts.gov for further clarification.
